During the winter, in order to familiate business uning before him as word as possible, the President vill, from ten to toutes o'clock each day, ac-go bunday, receive Senders and Segressistation, and from toutes winds until two such afternoon.

Its popular majority was greater, than ever it was. The people set the seal of approval upon each and every one of the acts. General Grant was mominated as the best representative of Republican Ideas. His fame was the fame of the party. He had led its armies; he had given the sternest and most rigid enforcement to all its mandates. He had indorsed its emancipation policy, and carried it out at the point of the swords of his victorious armies. He compatities with it in every respect. He was as much of a politician, a Republican politician, as it was possible for a military leader to be. He had served it faithfully and loyally, doing all that, through its majority in Congress, it commanded him to do. His nomination at the hands of the party was inevitable, not because of his great military name and fame, but because he represented the loyal spirit of the country, and the party that was the embodiment of that spirit. When he was imaggrassed four years ago he promised, in the insme of the party, the reform of the abuses which had crept in under the ride of his predeceasor. He promised that he should not only for the best interests of the country, that he should be as faithful to the best interests of the Republic in peace as he had been in war. How well and faithfully he has kept that promise the record of his administration, the history of the country during the last four years conclusively show. Every State has been restored to its proper relations in the Union. The most troublous foreign question have been satisfactority settled. The national debt has been reduced so low that the question of our ability to pay it to the last farthing its no looger a matter of doubt. Great reforms in administration have been achieved. In a word, he has fulfilled every promise that he made, and that the party made for him. And to that alone must be attributed the renewed success which came to him and to it in the late canvass against a combination, political and personal, such as has been rarely fortned in our history.

But in thi

banchary, of loose manners, of suspicions, and all but maryidalnable transactions. It is true that in the main it oncerns Democrations are such as Republicans. It bears upon one side as hard as upon the other. It throws distrust upon Democratins well as upon Republican leaders. There is a story of old Thaddens Stevens, that at one time, while he was a member of the louse of Representatives, two men came to Washington, each claiming that he was the signal and duly elected Representative of a Western Territory. When the question came before the House for action a Republican, the story goes, said to Mr. Stevens, who was then the undisputed party leader, "the fact is a widence of Tweed's guilt. The country will not fail to draw the distinction between the facts, without party dauger, to vote a Republican rescal? Let us vote for limit." Eight or nine years ago it was possible, without party dauger, to vote a Republican reacial and a Democratic reacal out, but the times and the generation have changed, and it is possible no more. We have entered upon a new era. What could be done then can not be done now. We done know that we are any better or any wiser or any greater, but no one will dispute that comist, at least, have some regard for the amenities and the proprieties of respectable politics.

The air is laden down with grave charges. They affect honor, honesty, and patriotism. If the Ropublican party wishes to live, if it wishes to govern the contry is the future, it must sift them to the very bottom. We do not declare that the rountry expects that the innocence of every man must be made as clear as the snow upon our valley sides. There is a spirit abroad in the land that it is not wise or safe to ignore, and the sooner our leaders in Congress, if we have any leaders there, begin to understand it the better. The Republican party cannot afford to do as its opponents have done, if it would perpetuate its raise. Republicanism means reform. It means advancement merally and politically; and if some who should have been faithful have fallen by the wayside, the party must march on without them. It is to be hoped there will be wisdom and courage enough to do it. The air is laden down with grave charges.

THE TRIBUNES INTEREST IN TWEED. It is a singular fact that all the Tribune's articles in regard to Tweod's late prosecution and trial were calculated to aid the escape of that wrote criminal. It usesiled the prosthat are remained in assume that prosecuting counsel is the most savage manner, reported the proceedings at the trial in an unfair and prejudiced way, and generally conveyed the impression that it would be far better pleased to see him sequitted than otherwise.

The Sun, in an article on the subject of 20, when the present editor of the Tribune seconded in wresting its management from r. Samuel Sinclair, Mr. Greeley's trusted trings and relative by marriage, it was arged that Tweed was the capitalist who rulained the money to enable Reid to get acroi of the stock. The story was indignity denied by the Tribune managers and awants was threatened against those who ried it. It looks, after all, as if there was no truth in it. ago, when the present editor of the Tribune

During the winter, in order to finelitate business counting they show a wind an possible, the President will, from twelf winder winders winder and ligrescatations, and from twelfs winder winders and ligrescatations, and from twelfs winder winders and figurescatations, and from twelfs winder winders and figurescatations, and control of the form the winders are the second of the form ten winder. It is dead beyond all hope to give the form ten winder at me. It is the offer winder to give in the country for the next part of a century or to throw the magnification opportunity away. It has just come out of an exciting political campaign more victorious than ever. In 1861 it came into power upon a popular minority vote. The discensions and the divisions of its enemies gave it strength. In 1863 it came into power again under Mr. Lincole with a majority of the people of the North upon its side. The east trapedy in a theatre of this city had the effect of temporarily remanding the control of a fairs back again from the hunds of its anchero enemies. But through the Senate and in the House of Representatives it practically complete a side as it had never before triumphed as it had never before triumphed as it had never before triumphed as the best representative of Republican Serves of the Senate and in the House of the country and gave shape to our foreign and domestic policy. In 1890, under then, Grant, the party triumphed as it had never before triumphed as the best representative of Republican Serves accessed of approval upon each and every one of the persons of the second of a second or a second of a second or the second of the second of the very dependent of the United States, Schwiger Collection for the second of the victorious armine. He purplet the from the party, He had led its armies; he had given the second of the second of the victorious armine. He proposition policy, and carried it out at the policy of his party, engaged actually in the same victorious a L. Dawes, for so many years in Congress from the same State, and the successor of Thaddeus Stevens in the House of its premierbeing the foremost man in the financial tions which have succeeded the reconquestions which have successfed the recon-truction levges, just as Stevens was formusat in the reconstruction days—be, too, bought stock at corrupt valuation, paid for it, drew dividends thorson, and then, under oath, de-nied any ownership in the premises, but ad-mitted that he held on to his bargain till there mitted that he held on to his dargain till ther was danger the light would strike it." W have quoted sufficient of this diatrice to giv an idea of the malignity and the misrepa-sentiation that animates it. Equally sever sentences are written about Mr. Patterso sentation that animates it. Equally severe sentences are written about Mr. Patterson and Gen. Logain and Mr. Kelley and others. Now, those who have read the reports and listened to the investigation as it came out from day to day in the two committees at the Capitol know how unfair and how untrutiful the article of the World is. So far as Mr. Wilson and Mr. Dawes and one or two others are conserned, the evidence against them is far from being what the World represents it to be. The case of Mr. Colfax, it is true, looks somewhat dark, but, it justice to him as a human being under damaging accusation, he should not be condemned until be has put in all he says he can put in in his defence. That is a courtesy, a right, extended to the most desperate criminal, and the World should have the justice to suspend its judgment until them. We have no desire whatever to attempt to cover up anything that any of these gentlemen may have corruptly done. We do not write as party journaliels, for in this whole matter there are duled higher than those of mere party, and we propose to discharge them. But we should not lose sight of the fact that all the evidence for and significate is not yet concluded, and that the decision of the court is yet to be rendered. An attempt to forestail public opinion is ernel and anjust, and will inevitably react inpon those who attempt it. There is another point in all this bosiness which should not be lost sight of, manney, that the investigation is entirely the work of the Republican party and its representatives in Congress. It was moved by the Speaker of the States in a general sense, and to the ex-chequer of the Government in a special sense. Private enterprise established the dise, and private means has sustained it to the present, but the time has now come when Government and much be extended to the line Government aid must be extended or the line oversiment and mass of excessed or the first must fail. It will be a source of mortification to all true and progressive Americans if the countrel of the commerce of Australia and the Pacific islands is permitted to wholly revert to the English Government, who, appreciating its importance, are making herculean efforts to swallow it up. The question of American patriotism is largely involved, and for the prominent reason that the line has been and will be a powerful adjunct to our may in those far-off seas; but possibly the greatest question is that of dollars and cents, for milone of dollars would annually accrue to the Foverament from import duties. It is not ong since Congress voted an additional half million subsidy to further aid the China line, manion successly to trituer and the Canada note, making the subsidy in round numbers a mil-tion per annum. Every argument in behalf of the subsidy for the China line applies with squal, if not stronger, force in favor of the iid asked for mail service by the Australian line. In the former it is not expected to open markets for our own products in any great degree, but in the latter exports of our wares and manufactured goods must become very and manufactured goods must become very heavy, as shown and proved in the debata; for by the Australian line we open a com-micros with more than three millions of our own race. This is the golden apportunity to settine this commerce. Engiand is stabborally soutesting every inch of ground, and is de-ermined to wrest the advantage from us in he Parific ocean. Since this measure has
